Gratitude

Am I the one who says “thank you”? When a teacher teaches a class I am in, or when I get up to leave after a potluck lunch, or when I benefit in some way from the loving service of another, do I verbally express my gratitude?

These questions came to my mind when reading about the 10 lepers. Ten were cleansed, but only one returned to say “thank you”: Jesus asked, "Were not all ten cleansed? Where are the other nine? Was no one found to return and give praise to God except this foreigner?" (Luke 17:17-18) Why didn't the nine return to thank Jesus? After all, their healing was life changing for them.

As clearly described in the Old Testament (Leviticus 13), people with skin diseases had to show themselves to the priest who determined how serious the infection was. Sometimes a mildly sick person simply had to wait awhile before washing and being ritually cleansed; but if the priest thought the skin infection to be a danger, then the person was sent away and had to live separately from their family in a community outside the city or town walls. Leprosy obviously fell into the ‘very serious’ category, and so lepers found themselves cut off from family and friends, destitute. There was perhaps only one comfort - they found themselves at least in the company of others similarly afflicted, and it seems (to judge from today’s story) that such leper communities transcended the usual prejudices against, for example, the Samaritans. It is the Samaritan leper who returns to thank Jesus, whereas the 9 Jews appear to have thought it was their ‘right’ to be cured.

All around us there are people giving of their time and effort to serve. In an age where gratitude is often a fading virtue, may we learn from the Samaritan to be the one who returns to express gratitude. After all, we are surrounded by and benefit from the hard work and service of others. A simple “thank you” not only expresses the gratefulness of my heart but also inspires the servant to greater works of service. Be the one.
