A Good Conscience

. . . holding on to faith and a good conscience. 1 Timothy 1:19

In Paul’s letter to his young protégé Timothy, he urges him to hold on to a good conscience. What does this mean? The conscience is the inner God-given moral compass that aids Christians in making righteous choices.

Human beings are unique in the world because they have not only instinctual, automatic survival responses, but also the ability to make ethical decisions rooted in God’s morality. What distinguishes the human race from other look-alikes in the astonishing world of God’s creation is their ability to reason, deduce and imagine, forming our conscience - a sort of library of ways of thinking and acting which define our personalities.

All creatures react to their environment in a predictable way : hunger induces the need to eat, thirst to drink, pain to seek its absence, tiredness to sleep. A tired animal sleeps; a tired human may act against his instincts : delay sleeping till later, reasoning that it could be safer, better and more therapeutic in the long run to do so. ‘Automatic’ reactions to events around us are designed to ensure longer life. But humans can also reason way beyond these simple urges; a human can think and weigh up possibilities; a thinking Christian can, as it were, open a book in his ‘conscience library’. This library has been collected in a life of prayer, study of God’s word, and following Christ’s example. A Christian trains his conscience to radiate and resonate the love of God : to act as Jesus would act and make decisions based on a conscience trained by the teachings of scripture. By holding on to faith even in the most terrible of situations, and by never deviating from Christ’s own example of righteous thinking and acting, rooted in obedience to God, listening to the voice of the Holy Spirit and, above all, by passing our every thought, every action through the filter of “What would Christ have done in this situation?” Such a Christ-rooted conscience library is a treasure house indeed.

Family News

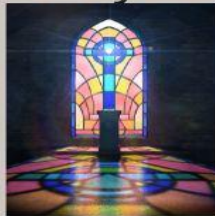

Although the conscience provides moral guidance to those facing ethical choices, it is not a foolproof guide. The conscience can be damaged, negatively reshaped and even calloused. In Chapter 4, Paul warns Timothy of those “whose consciences have been seared as with a hot iron” (1 Timothy 4:2). It is no wonder, therefore, that Paul urged Timothy to “hold on” to a “good” conscience: protect it, safeguard it, shelter it, keep it pure and clean. May we thank God for our consciences, holding on to “good” ones, so that we may be aided in living righteously in an unrighteous world.

Parable of the Weeds

Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43

"This photo can go along with the theme of Kingdom of God because it can show how beautiful his creation is on just a simple day.

I chose the Parable of the Weeds because although it may be a parable of darkness, it still reminds us of how God will be there for us in our darkest times. Even if we have an enemy, we are still God's creation. We were created in his eyes."
