THE ANGER OF JESUS, Part I

Mark 3:5 –

He looked around at them in anger and, deeply distressed at their stubborn hearts, said to the man, "Stretch out your hand." He stretched it out, and his hand was completely restored.

Anger is an emotion we know all too well. Most of us have witnessed first hand the destructive path left from an explosive tirade – leaving hurt feelings, damaged relationships and seeds of bitterness. We work earnestly to keep anger in check and consider it, for the most part, as a negative emotion to be avoided at all cost.

Because of anger’s negative connotation, we take note, and are perhaps surprised, when scripture spotlights the anger of Jesus. Mark 3:5 makes it clear that Jesus was “angry.” What are we to make of this?

The setting was in Capernaum, Jesus’ adopted hometown - the beautiful place that has been our focus on Sunday mornings these last few weeks. We can imagine on a beautiful Sabbath morning, Jesus going into the synagogue, his heart, as always, full of love for the people there and with a desire to worship God. It was there that Jesus took note of a man with the shriveled hand; perhaps the man held his disfigured hand in the folds of his garment so that people would not notice and shy away.

The fault-finding Pharisees were also in their midst: wanted to entrap Jesus, especially as He had successfully countered them over the disciples’ plucking of grain on a previous Sabbath. We can visualize them rubbing their hands at the prospect of being able to accuse Jesus of “work” this Saturday. Jesus, knowing all, spots the man with the shriveled hand and cures him then and there, in front of all. The Pharisees seize their moment. The people remain silent. The man had a shriveled hand - but the Pharisees show us their shriveled hearts. Jesus is angry: angry at their wilful, stubborn, earth-based blindness.

When considering the anger of Jesus, we first note that Jesus’ anger bears no resemblance to the type of anger that we often see around us. His anger is never rooted in selfishness or bitterness. Rather, his anger is always directed towards men’s affronts to God or insults to the things of God. Jesus’ anger is not petty, or frivolous, or self-serving. More next week. Until then, God bless.
