BOONE
COUNTY

In these Covid-19 days I find myself looking at the various Arkansas counties to see the daily virus report totals. Never before had I really stopped to notice the great variety of county names in our state. Some names are common like Scott, Lincoln, Cross and Sharp. Others like Yell, Chicot, Hempstead and Crittenden are more unusual. There is a county in Arkansas called Arkansas, and there is a county bordering the Little River called Little River.

The name of our county has an interesting history. Originally part of territory claimed by Osage and Cherokee Native Americans, Boone County became part of the United States in the Louisiana Purchase in 1812, and started its US existence as a territory of Missouri. Arkansas was admitted to the Union as a state in its own right in 1836. The state line was drawn largely along the 36°30" parallel. Preceding the creation of Arkansas as a state, Boone county was part of Lawrence and Izard counties, before Carroll county was formed in 1833; later Boone county was carved out of Carroll county with a little strip from Marion county.

So, what of its name? Here opinion is divided. Some choose to think that our county is named after Daniel Boone. As you all know, Daniel Boone (1734 - 1820) was an American pioneer, explorer and frontiersman whose exploits on the Kentucky frontier made him into a folk hero. He was a legend in his own lifetime, especially after an account of his adventures was published in 1784, framing him as the typical American frontiersman. After his death, Boone became the subject of many heroic tall tales and works of fiction. His adventures—real and legendary—helped create the archetypal frontier hero of American folklore. The epic mythology surrounding him often overshadows the historical details of Boone's life.

The problem is that Daniel Boone had little, if anything at all, to do with our corner of Arkansas. He represented various counties in the Virginia General Assembly, on the coast east of the Appalachian

A MESSAGE FROM OUR ELDERS

The elders continue to monitor the present health crisis and consider how and when we can worship together again as a group. We believe this needs to be in a way that allows for meaningful fellowship and communication with one another in a reasonably safe environment. This decision process is being made in consideration of scripture's direction about our worship, your safety, and local and state health guidelines.

At this time, we plan to continue our present online meetings and reassess the situation on May 18th with a possible return to group worship on Sunday, May 24th. Until then, please continue daily in your study of scripture and prayer that everyone stays healthy and we can meet as a group soon. And again, please know that if you are in need of anything the elders, deacons and ministers are still available at any time.

BOONE COUNTY

Mountains, and is most often associated with Kentucky (part of the state of Virginia until it became one in its own right in 1791). After various difficulties, Boone migrated to eastern Missouri, where he spent the last 20 years of his life. Still, Boone County is a long way from where Missouri meets Kentucky, and there is no evidence that Daniel Boone ever came to our region.

It could have been named after him, in admiration, but there is no document to prove this. The truth is that our county was originally named not Boone but Boon County, as it was so nice to live here! How the final 'e' got added to the name is also not recorded - perhaps simply because everyone knows how to spell Daniel's last name! The ups and downs of Daniel Boone's life are reflected in a way in some of the turbulent history of Boone County, but I believe that it is indeed a boon to live here, and I'm sure you all agree!

Attempting to pin down the truth on how Boone County got its name failed to give me the certainty I was looking for. Two possibilities, at least, are given. I am not certain which is the truth. Thankfully, God has not left us Christians without a resource to give us spiritual certainty. The Bible never fails to give us the certainty that we are looking for. Luke called the Bereans "noble" because they "examined the Scriptures every day to see if what Paul said was true" (Acts 17:11). Determined to know the truth, these noble Christians examined all doctrine to make certain that the things they were hearing were true. Noble indeed.
