Joanna and Susanna

In recent weeks we have been considering the women spotlighted by Luke in the life and ministry of Jesus. Today we will consider two lesser known women: Joanna & Susanna. They may be less known, but they are not less important.

Joanna

Joanna is one of the most fascinating of the people who surrounded Jesus. She was not alone, because Luke tells us there were many women who helped Jesus and the disciples in their mission. This is, in itself, an eye opener in the patriarchal society of the time of Christ. Surprisingly there were women who owned property, and who had access to resources separately from their husband/menfolk. Joanna is the most important of these: she was the wife of Chuza, Herod Antipas' steward. She lived in the royal palace and was no stranger to the riches of kingly life. We do not know if Chuza was a follower of Christ (in The Chosen we are directed to believe that he was not), but Joanna was an active and important member of Jesus' followers. She was able to absent herself from her work in the palace in order to give support to the movement. She was not a woman of the general populace - and the fact that Christianity permeated into the heart of Herod's palace is in itself intriguing. At the resurrection, Joanna was also present; together with Mary Magdalene she went to the tomb on that Resurrection Day, in great sorrow and distress to anoint Jesus' body. However, instead of administering wholesome spices and ointments, Joanna becomes one of the first witnesses to the resurrection, and runs, with Mary Magdalene, to inform the apostles. So, Joanna is a key player in early Christian circles; she must have been a strong character to stand against the pressures of being a royal servant, but a follower of Christ. And her loving care in going to anoint Jesus' body was transformed into the joy of the honor of announcing Jesus' triumph over death.

Susanna

Although less is known about Susanna, she is listed by name as among those healed by Jesus, devout disciples in their own right, who provided financial and practical support for Jesus' ministry. These women were more than bystanders, they were active disciples and supporters of Jesus' ministry "out of their own means" (Luke 8:3). The diversity among these Luke 8 women is remarkable. Mary Magdalene, Joanna and Susanna were very likely from three very different strata of society. And, yet, they are mentioned together as working together, ignoring their differences for the sake of what brings them together: Jesus. Such is the true nature of discipleship in the church: diverse, yet united. Different, yet one in Christ.

We are thankful to these women for teaching us the value of the everyday disciple - using the unique means, position and opportunities to support the Lord of all.

Announcements

Northside is getting a new playground!

Our congregation is providing the property location and the Arkansas Executive Prep Academy, located 2 blocks to our southwest, is providing the funding. When completed, the school's students will have priority for its use during normal school hours and Northside at all other times. A gated fence around the playground, accessible only by the school and our congregation, is also planned. The Elders ask that you stay clear of this area during construction and until an announcement is made that it is ready for use.

The Peacemakers: Vol. 3 The Mission of Mercy
by Levi Hursh
Story's premise is based on David's actions toward Saul in 1 Sam. 24 & 26

"Emma nodded. 'King Saul was being really awful to David! He even tried to KILL him!' Ryben's eyes got big, 'That's scary.'
"It was," Emma said. "But one day, David had a chance to get even with Saul."
"Wyatt sat up. "Did he do it?"
Emma shook her head, "No. He chose to forgive him instead."
Creek shouted in disbelief, "Wait! He didn't get revenge at all? Even though Saul wanted to kill!?"
"Nope!" Emma said. "He trusted God and showed Saul mercy."
Everyone got quiet. They decided to pray together and go home for the night."
