ISSUE NO. 33

THE LINEN BELT

In Jeremiah 13, God instructed Jeremiah to buy a linen belt and wear it around his waist. After a time, God told Jeremiah to hide the belt in a rock crevice, leaving it exposed to the elements. Later, Jeremiah un-dug the belt: finding it ruined and completely useless.

The power of illustration

Parents and teachers all know that children learn best by doing and by copying. They generally do less well if just talked to and instructed verbally. This applies to adults as well : telling someone how to change a tire using a jack is completely different from standing beside someone and letting them do it step by step, with the tools to hand, guided when necessary. This fact about learning is beautifully illustrated with Jeremiah's linen belt. God could just have lamented to Jeremiah that Israel and Judah had fallen away; Jeremiah might then have forgotten the point. But by drawing the lesson out over several days, making him do an unusual task, and then having him UNdo it and see that the belt is ruined, really strongly drives God's point home. Jeremiah will never forget - and although we simply read the story, it is so unusual, we are more likely to remember, too.

The lessons of the illustration

There are important lessons learned from the linen belt. First, God desires to be close to his people. "For as the belt is bound around a man's waist, so I bound the whole house of Judah to me .. to be my people" (Jeremiah 13:11). The belt symbolizes a closeness to God that He desires. So long as the belt (God's people) is near to his bosom, the belt is useful and whole. But, when the belt leaves its closeness and is cast before the elements, it becomes useless and ruined.

Second, the linen belt illustration points to three causes of the "belt's" ruin: pride (Jeremiah 13:9), refusing to listen (Jeremiah 13:10), and stubbornness. These three vices never lead to closeness to God : the closeness that God still desires to have with his people. When we become prideful, we stop listening and become stubborn, stubborn even to the loving rebuke of God to return to him. God always desires to be close to us. May we never allow our pride, refusal to listen and our stubbornness to ruin us and make us useless.
