The Tares

Jesus' Parable of the Sower is a vivid, everyday story for his listeners to evaluate the responsiveness and quality of their own hearts. In Jesus' story, all hearts are given the opportunity to receive the seed (the Word of God). The seed is always the same. The invitation is always the same. The only variable is the responsiveness of the recipient's heart. The first heart-type is hard and the devil swiftly removes exposure to the life-changing seed. The second heart is shallow, swiftly lured back into an old life, only briefly swayed by the power of the seed. Let's consider the third soil offered by Jesus: The Seed Sown Among the Tares (Weeds or Thorns).

The three Gospel accounts (versions) of this same story all agree that the seed that falls among thorns is "choked" by the deceitfulness of wealth. The implication is, as so often in the Bible (where we read that rich men have the greatest difficulty in entering the kingdom of heaven) that the pursuit of money leads us away from God. It is easy to worship money because it appears to open doors, and he who is rich, has power and influence. So, if we are blessed enough to possess money, we must be very careful stewards of it and not let it overwhelm us, making us self-important, haughty and domineering. What money buys is ultimately corrupted by moths and rust, and is lost at death.

Each gospel adds another aspect for us to be wary of: Mark introduces "the worries of this life" (we become so involved in the transient stories of things around us, that we forget the essential); and also the "desires for other things" - fleeting pleasures bought for us by money. Luke adds that pleasures assail us and we risk not maturing - the message could not be clearer....money can buy us position and belongings and renown, but, it does not buy us eternal things, like love and faith - and what is our faith except the deepest love affair imaginable, the story of a man who loved us so much that he laid down his life for us, and instructs us to do the same.

Family News

Of the three types of soils considered thus far, perhaps this third soil is the greatest vice for modern Christians. Distracted and overwhelmed by the cares of this world, attaining fruitfulness and maturity eludes us. We must be ever vigilant against the lures of pleasure, money and material things that matter little in the scope of eternity.

Dear church family,

Thank you so much for the cards and prayers during Joe's health struggles. Joe & Marsha appreciated them.

Thank you also for the cards, prayers & expressions of sympathy following Joe's passing.

Please keep Marsha in your prayers as she deals with her loss and continues to care for three great-grandchildren.

In Christian love,
Michele Carroll
