Thermal Trespassing

Recently two men were photographed walking up to the geyser opening of Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park and taking a peek down the shaft. They were arrested for “Thermal Trespassing”.

Old Faithful was named in 1870 when its three discoverers traveled down the Firestone River and became the first New Americans to see it. It erupts regularly (hence the name) and an eruption can be calculated as a set length of time from the preceding spout. If an eruption lasts less than 2½ minutes, then the following one will follow in 65 minutes; otherwise the next eruption follows in 91 minutes. Each eruption shoots up to 8,400 gallons of water into the air, to a maximum height of 185 feet. The temperature inside the geyser at 72 ft down has been measured as 244°F.

Intriguingly, in the early days of Yellowstone as a National Park, the geyser was often used as a laundry! Clothes were deposited during a quiet period and ejected (washed but not ironed!) in the next eruption, but there was a snag: woolens were torn to shreds and only cottons and linens survived.

In thinking of this news event, two things come to mind. 1. How easy it is for us to apply laws to everyone but ourselves; 2. An understanding that many laws are in place for our own protection and wellbeing. Let’s consider both of these from a spiritual perspective.

I suppose it is human nature to expect everyone else to obey God’s laws, while giving ourselves a pass or an exemption card.

THANK YOU

Thank you so much for hosting the Christweens youth rally. My kids and parents really enjoyed the experience. I was really impressed with how many of your youth and adults participated to make it a successful event.

Kids this age really need something like this, and I appreciate your church's efforts to help them grow in the Lord.

I hope to see you all again next year.

In Him, Trey Reely

When reading the Bible or hearing a lesson, we may be tempted to think of people in the room who “needed that”, rather than applying the commandments or teachings to ourselves. When the men walked up to the geyser shaft, witnesses said they couldn't believe their disregard for the warning signs, written in multiple languages, prohibiting people from doing exactly what they were doing. In the eyes of these men, the rules simply didn't apply to them. Hopefully, the rare selfie was worth the fine and time in jail that they will receive.

Most of us do not like rules. Having the least number of rules possible but as many as necessary is a good motto. The commands of God provide the spiritual direction and protection that is good for us. And although we sometimes do not like them, we are obliged to obey them. They are in place for our own protection and wellbeing.

We trust that God, knower of all that is good and right, has His reasons for the commandments that He gives. The warning signs at Old Faithful are not posted to ruin our fun, but are there to protect us from the boiling water that bursts forth from the ground.

When reading the Bible, let's apply God's directives to ourselves, appreciate them, and understand that our loving God gives us commandments and laws for our own good.
