Oldest Trick In The Book

Recently, I was reading that police officers purposefully touch the taillight or rear portion of a vehicle that they have pulled over for a traffic violation. To be honest, I have never noticed this practice (I am not disclosing if I have ever been pulled over!), but when I read about it, I was intrigued.

One article suggested that touching the car is one of the “oldest tricks in the book”. But why? Why would an officer who pulls a car over for a routine traffic violation want to touch the car prior to speaking with the driver? Is there a logical rationale for such a practice?

The answer lies in providing physical proof that the officer has approached that particular car. By touching the vehicle, the policeman leaves fingerprints on the taillight or rear portion of the car to prove that he/she has been on the scene of this traffic incident. In the event of any kind of altercation or problem, the officer would have ‘signed’ the interaction.

Two ideas came to mind when thinking of this common police practice. First, I began to ponder how each person leaves marks of his existence, his fingerprints, upon the world in which he lives. Last week, as I visited many of my ancestors’ graves, I paused to consider the imprint of these loved ones upon my life. They were born, lived, and died -- leaving a legacy (fingerprints) upon the world. And, whereas their bodies are gone, their mark upon the world endures. This sobering thought gives me cause to consider the mark that I am leaving for others to see.

Second, I looked around at the beauty and wonder of the world around me and pondered the fingerprints of God on everything that has been made. Just as many cars have officers’ fingerprints in obvious but unseen places (that is, until the car is washed!), so the ordinary things around us have God’s fingerprints on them. We just have to know where to look.

One of the ways to help us make out God's fingerprints is to use the filter of prayer. Prayer helps us to focus our ever-fluttering minds on the essential, making us more in tune with God's will. Thus, a simple trip to the store for groceries may reveal unexpected blessings if we know where and how to look. Perhaps it would be in the shy smile of the child in the supermarket aisle, the quizzical look of the cashier trying to find some sense in the automatic, repeated scanning actions required of him/her, or simply in the chance meeting of a person, as yet not a friend, we happen to meet in the Walmart parking lot.

God's fingerprints are everywhere - may we develop the skill of truly Christian eyes to help us see them - and react to them. Like the police officer who pulls over the car, may we sign our fingerprints on God's creation and become co-creators of good in our community.
