God Moves Toward

We recently completed a scan of passages in Isaiah which speak of good news. There were obvious passages such as chapters 40-55, which we call the “servant songs” in which we discover the suffering servant. Other chapters included, but were not limited to, Isaiah 2 and the hope in a kingdom consisting of all nations, Isaiah 58 and what is a true fast, Isaiah 61 and the year of Jubilee, or Isaiah 65 and the promise of a New Creation. Take opportunity to read any of those chapters and you will be blessed. One passage was Isaiah 25.

What does hope look like to Isaiah? When scanning through the chapter, specifically verses 6-9, this is the main idea we discovered: Hope is knowing that God MOVES in grace TOWARD us--even for all eternity.

- God will exercise justice over the wicked.
- He will give refuge to the poor (hmm OT says an awful lot about taking care of the poor).
- He will prepare and serve the finest of foods for all people.
- He will remove the fear of death among nations.
- He will destroy death.
- He will wipe away tears from all faces (btw, doesn't say there won't be any tears).
- He will remove all disgrace from His people.

That seems to be such a common, yet strange idea in the Bible, doesn't it? God keeps moving toward us. Regardless of humans doing such foolish things, God keeps coming and coming and coming. Even in eternity He keeps coming. He's not trying to lose any of us. He wants to be with us.

Now, to put a visual image to what Isaiah said in a way that you and I can relate: Can you imagine a nail-pierced hand reaching for your face, wiping a tear from your cheek, while insisting that your shame has been removed? That’s chilling. That’s a God who moves toward us!
