ISSUE NO. 30

Over the past week, Jennifer and I had a wonderful opportunity to guide eight of our youth to Colorado for a backpacking trek in the Rockies. We do this every other year. This is now the fourth time we have led our teens on a wilderness trek since we moved here in 2016. Each trip is unique and special in its own way, but there is one thing they all have in common: I am awestruck by how engaged our teens are with God when in the wilderness and how greatly they rally together to persevere.

This year, we spent time in God’s word, applying the book of Haggai to our relationship with Jesus. We focused our discussions on building a life where Jesus is at our center, both individually and as His church. It was a great study. Haggai is a wonderful little book with so much to offer for us today.

Now, on to our hiking stats: Overall, we trekked an approximate 28 miles with 50-65 pound packs over the course of 5 days with a combined vertical ascent of 8,000 feet. Days 1 and 2 were mostly backpacking through the Texas Creek area to get us on the Timberline trail toward the Illinois Creek area. On day 3, we crossed over the continental divide at Anne Pass (12,600) and had to harness up to descend a snow cornice in order to stay on our path. At the bottom, we “enjoyed” a jump into Lake Anne, which is a snow fed lake (about 45 degrees). Brrrrr. On day 4, we began our summit attempt at 3:45am and made it to the top of Mt. Huron (14,003 ft) at 8:30am. That was an 8 mile round trip to summit and back to our overnight camp with a total vertical ascent of 3,500 ft. It was a rigorous hike for our teens, but provided needful challenges to stimulate our growth with Jesus and with each other.
